

Managing Your Portfolio in the Event of a Disaster

A disaster might affect our ability to help you manage your portfolio. Consequently, we maintain and regularly update a Business Continuity Plan (BCP) designed to minimize the impact of a disaster on our firm's operations, and to expedite our ability to restore normal operations.

The BCP includes four primary elements:

- How Schultz Collins protects your documents and data
- Our plans to restore normal business operations
- Alternate ways of contacting Schultz Collins, if normal channels are unavailable
- Procedures for accessing your assets directly

While we hope we never to have to use it, we want to share highlights of our BCP with you, so you will know how to manage your portfolio in the event of disaster.

Protecting Your Documents and Data

Schultz Collins routinely backs up the data on our computer network to hard drives and tapes maintained at geographically remote locations. We scan all critical documents, and maintain backup copies electronically. Hard copies of historical documents are maintained at a secure offsite storage facility.

Restoring Normal Operations

If we cannot access our San Francisco headquarters office, or if its systems are unavailable at our office, we will move to a back up facility. We maintain key information and document retrieval systems at our back up facility, and will operate from that location until more permanent arrangements can be established

Contacting Schultz Collins in the Event of Disaster

If you learn of a disaster affecting San Francisco and you are unable to reach us through normal channels, please call our emergency telephone message system at 410.583.7055, or visit our website (www.schultzcollins.com). We will use these systems as an alternate communications channel and to keep clients apprised of our recovery plans.
